MAXANDMAIDENINK.COM & THE STUDIO'S LISTINGS

PREPARED FOR Jennifer Mulholland Founder & Designer	PREPARED BY Musk Client operations	CHECKED LIVE October 4, 2026 Every page, every listing
--	---	---

Dear Jennifer,

On your About page you write that your philosophy has always been “it’s all in the details.” Your recent work proves it: Leila Roker’s wedding, featured in Vogue; a celebration in Taormina with Sonal J. Shah; escort walls and fabricated signage with Veronica Joy Events and One Off Creative.

Your website and listings haven’t caught up yet. Most still describe an earlier version of the studio, one built around invitations and written for couples, with a few small slips a planner or a couple would notice before they ever reach your inbox.

So I read every public page the way a new client would, and checked each finding live. Inside are twelve details worth fixing, each with the exact wording to use. None of them touch your design work. They are the frame around it.

Warmly,

Musk

I THEN & NOW

The work has moved on. The website is still telling the story of an earlier studio.

Four quick fixes, about an hour in all. They are the first things a careful reader notices.

01 The typo Google shows first

INVESTMENT PAGE

FOUND Your Investment page says custom clients invest “between $10,000.00 to $20,00.00 plus.” Google quotes that exact line under your Investment result, so it may be the first price a new client reads.

THE FIX “On average, a Max and Maiden Ink custom client invests $10,000 to $20,000+ in their wedding suite, save the dates included.”

One price style throughout: “$3,000,” not “$3000.00”; “100 invitation sets,” not “#100.”

03 A placeholder page that Google lists

MAXANDMAIDENINK.COM/BLOG

FOUND The blog page still shows the website template’s sample posts: “Lorem ipsum” text under the title “Dawson’s Creek Nuptials,” dated June 2017. Google lists it among your site’s pages.

THE FIX Unpublish the page, or point it to Press. If you would like a journal later, relaunch it with real stories, starting with the Wychmere Beach Club wedding.

04 Links that lead away

EVERY PAGE

- ◇ The footer still reads “Copyright 2018.”
- ◇ The “Harper Maven Design” credit links to a Washington, DC wedding photographer’s site, so every page sends visitors to another vendor.
- ◇ X’s latest post is from August 2018 and Facebook’s from August 2020. The Pinterest icon opens pinterest.it, the Italian site.

THE FIX Update the year, correct or remove the credit link, and lead with Instagram, where the studio is active and verified. Keep Pinterest, whose bio is already current, and point it to pinterest.com.

III POSITIONING & PROOF

Your work now spans far more than paper, much of it alongside planners. The site should say so.

05 A headline for the studio you are now

HEADER · HOME PAGE

FOUND Every page carries the line “Artful invitations for beautiful love stories,” and the home page says you serve “the discerning bride and event planner.” Your Instagram says more: “Branding, Stationery + Signage, Guest Experience. Domestic + International.”

MAX AND MAIDEN INK

EVENT BRANDING · STATIONERY
SIGNAGE · GUEST EXPERIENCE

WELCOME “Max and Maiden Ink creates visual identities, stationery, signage and guest-experience details for highly considered celebrations, from the first piece a guest receives to the last detail they see on the night. Based in northern New Jersey, working domestically and internationally.”

Keep “Let’s tell your love story...” as the sign-off. It still sounds like you.

06 Show the work beyond the invitation

CUSTOM GALLERY

FOUND Every image in the Custom gallery is an invitation suite. The escort walls, signage and installations appear only on Instagram and in planners’ posts, like the escort wall at Pendry Natirar with Veronica Joy Events, or the signage at The Grove with One Off Creative.

THE FIX Add an Event Branding gallery with three case studies, each told from the first touchpoint to the dancefloor: save the date, invitation, signage, escort display, late-night details. Credit the planner, venue and photographer on each, so they, and editors, can share it.

07 Your newest proof isn’t on the site yet

PRESS · CLIENT LOVE

FOUND Press links to nine features, but not two recent ones: Leila Roker’s wedding in Vogue and the Wychmere Beach Club wedding in Cape Cod Life. The NJ Bride tile opens the magazine’s home page, not your feature. Client Love holds six notes, all from couples, none from planners.

THE FIX Add both features to the top of Press, link NJ Bride to the article itself, and ask two or three planners for a line each; Veronica Joy Events, Sidekick Events and Sonal J. Shah are natural first asks. A planner’s note tells other planners you are safe to recommend.

IV FROM INTEREST TO INQUIRY

Two places where a planner or a couple is ready to reach out, and the site doesn't yet make it easy.

08 An inquiry form with a planner path

CONTACT

FOUND The form asks for name, email, “Wedding date,” “wedding venue and budget” and “tell me more about your event!” A planner can't say they are a planner, and no one can say what they need.

THE FIX · ONE FORM, TWO PATHS

09 Suites people can find and ask about

SEMI-CUSTOM

FOUND The suites (Darcy, Gellert, Forsythe, Thea and more) are uploaded as images only. Their names live inside the pictures, none of the page's 42 images has alt text, and nothing links to an inquiry. Google can't read a single suite name, and a couple who falls for Thea has no next step.

THE FIX Under each suite, add a line of text, an “Inquire about this suite” link to the form, and alt text such as “Thea semi-custom wedding invitation suite.”

10 Titles and descriptions for Google

EVERY PAGE

FOUND Each page title is just the page name (“Home,” “Custom,” “Contact”) and no page has a meta description, so Google writes its own. For some pages it uses your menu and footer text:

11 A Google Business Profile

GOOGLE SEARCH · MAPS

FOUND A Google Maps search for “Max and Maiden Ink” returns no listing for the studio; the closest match is a tattoo shop in Queensland, Australia. Search shows no business panel either, and Google’s AI summary describes you from old directory text (see 12).

THE FIX Claim a free Google Business Profile as a service-area business, so no street address is shown. Add categories such as Graphic designer and Wedding service, portfolio images and the description from 12, then invite recent couples and planners to review you there.

THE FIX · ONE MASTER DESCRIPTION, PASTED EVERYWHERE

"Max and Maiden Ink is an event branding and custom stationery studio in northern New Jersey, working domestically and internationally. Founder Jennifer Mulholland and her team create visual identities, invitation suites, signage, escort displays and guest-experience details for highly considered celebrations, in close collaboration with planners and designers. Letterpress, foil and fine papers; custom and semi-custom."

Use one location line and your website's minimums ($3,000 semi-custom, $5,000 custom) everywhere.

VI A NOTE TO CLOSE

Jennifer, everything in these pages comes from public sources, checked on October 4, 2026.

None of it touches your design work, which already speaks for itself.

The first four fixes take about an hour. The rest is the work that is easy to postpone in a busy season: copy, listings, forms and profiles. I would be glad to take all of it off your plate, so your time stays with the design.

Thank you for reading.
